Sometimes it's the journey rather than the destination

What is skateboarding?

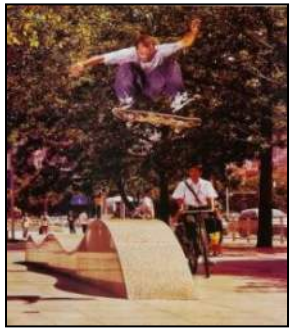

Skateboarding has a rich history spanning over 50 years.

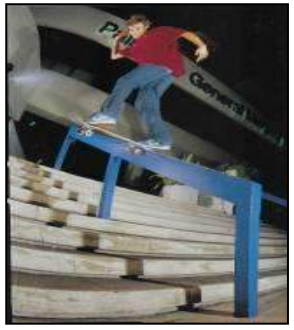

Skateboarding is a legitimate competitive sport for amateur and professional athletes.

Skateboarding is a large industry with a solid foundation.

Skateboarding connects millions of people, worldwide.

Skateboarding is an exciting lifestyle that extends beyond the act of skateboarding itself.

Skateboarding today…
an established recreational activity

Skateboarding is an exciting recreational activity with millions of participants worldwide

10 + million skateboarders in North America (NSGA)

78% of skateboarders identify themselves as ‘street’ skaters (2003 board trac survey)

“Action Sports” (skateboarding, BMX biking and freestyle inline skating) have been the fastest growing area of youth recreation over the last decade

Skateboarding is more than just fun

Unstructured exploration of a physical environment:

- Increases cognitive and emotional development
- Increase in complex problem solving
- Increases physical literacy
- Promotes a healthy and active lifestyle
- Life long participation
- Very few barriers
- Skateboarding is safer than many other recreational choices available to today's youth (National Consumer Safety Commission)

Skateboarding today… as a sport!

Professional Skateboarding today:

Many of the world's top pros are Canadian

World Cup Skateboarding has been sanctioning professional contests and setting judging standards for over a decade

(ie. X games, Gravity Games, Dew Tour etc)

There are numerous international pro contests in North America:

(ie. Maloof Money Cup, Vans Park Series, Street League)

Skateboarding is officially included in the 2021 Olympic Games
